

The Center for Economic and Policy Research

presents

Struggling to Care: Is the Market Failing Working Families?

sponsored by

Senators Barack Obama, Hillary Clinton, Edward Kennedy and Christopher Dodd Representatives Rosa DeLauro, George Miller and Carolyn Maloney

Monday, June 26
1:00-2:30 pm
430 Senate Dirksen Building

Robert Drago, Professor, Labor Studies and Women's Studies, The Pennsylvania State University, and Co-Chair, Take Care Net Steering Committee, will discuss the "care gap," how it is measured, and how it can be filled.

Danielle Ewen, Director, Child Care and Early Education Policy, Center for Law and Social Policy, will highlight the shortage of quality child care in the United States and discuss how to improve the situation.

This is the second in a series of five briefings exploring challenges facing working families in the United States and discussing policy solutions. The next briefing will be held on July 21.

For more information, please contact Liz Chimienti at (202) 293-5380 x110 or chimienti@cepr.net